

International Society for Harmonization of Cultures & Civilizations

Mission Statement

To create a harmony that enables all beings to enjoy and fulfill 'life'.

About the Society

April, 2000

At the threshold of the twenty-first century we are keenly aware of the 'oneness' of all beings. In order to further enhance this relationship, our society aspires to create or develop an advanced world culture derived from any cultural heritage or combination thereof.

Introduction (Or call for membership)

Upon closer examination of culture today, we feel that the age of comparative cultures has become extinct. The very nature of the word 'compare' can bring forth the idea of competition in that one culture is superior to another. Because of the evolutionary state of humans in the world today, we are compelled at this time to induce the birth of a world culture which takes anything from any culture in the world and combines it with anything else from any element of any culture; or even brand new ideas never before realized. This cultural evolution will contain multiple facets, and promote a deep-seeded harmony.

We invite all people of the world to join our society, which is not so much a closed country with guarded borders, but an association of like-minded, peace-loving individuals with a vision of fostering relationships with others in our race, the human race. We beseech all people to end fighting and competition. Self-centered thought needs to become the behavior of the past. The enhancement of human understanding through arts, culture, medicine, economics, and politics is what drives us. Anyone interested in the promotion of world peace through such a manner should join the Society, regardless of citizenship, religion, color, or creed.

President Kuniyoshi Ueda

